

Virtual Heritage Network

Last Updated Friday, 11 January 2008

Virtual Heritage is the oldest and largest repository of documents, news and information relating to heritage and technology. Operating since 1997, it has been designed to be an authoritative information portal for the utilisation of technology for the education, interpretation, conservation and preservation of Natural, Cultural and World Heritage.

How can you participate in the Virtual Heritage website? Easy! If you have any news, event information, or would like to post a paper, document or news article, send it to us! We'll post it free of charge (though we're light on volunteer resources so it might take a little while to get it on the site so please be patient. If you'd like to be an editor, please see our page on how you can contribute.
